tive Tests that Challenge Competition The Sunday School Superintendent and the Siri in the Turban-Lots of Human Nature, Food, Music, and Cookery.

Hyou are passionately fond of food or moderately interested in your fellowmen, if you are curious to know how many thousand horse ower the great North American digestive apparatus represents, if you would give your craven Pharisaical soul a broader horizon, and your nineteenth century, pessimistic, malarial mentality a breath of fresh air, take a turn in the miniature town at the Madison Square

Last night when the heavens blazed with arches of luminous splendor and banners of atreaming fire were flung wide among the stars in honor of the discoverer of this land of freedom and pumpkin pie, of democratic equality and doughnuts, the immortal Chrispher himself, in doublet and hose of white and crimson, in the gallus cape of the Spanish cavalier and jewelled cap, as brave and gay as If he hadn't just been released from quaratine after a two months' sea vorage, stood at the entrance of the food show frying findjacks like an artiste, tossing each succulent circle high in the air and catching it on a plate with a fearless dexterity indicative of the master mind which could mark out a pathway through naknown seas to find a world.

And just back of his habitation, in a quaint little Dutch house, a group of sweet-faced maidens, in the Hollander's cap of lace, serve scalding hot cocoa, with a smile so demure

d nerve paralyzing that one never knows how he has burned his mouth until the next

"And so you are not exhibiting this year." queried one of them as she prepared a particularly delicious cup for a young man dressed in three or four kinds of clothes, as if his toilet had been made in haste to escape from a fire. No: they didn't consider our goods a health product, don't you see." "And what are your goods?" "Bourbon whiskey, with a bouquet that St.

anthony would smile at. But this is kind of an Elliott F. Shepard Sunday school rally, a baby convocation, where you get melted milk and sterilized cream straight and Paradise grog of all sorts for teathing infants and unweaned lambs like the husband of Mrs. Vanderbit Elliott—"
"And cocoa." interrupted the girl, with a flash of the dark eyes and a bewildering smile which made the man's bair curl.

Across the room a handsome girl in Turkish Aress and turban, with the beautiful strong throat of the Venus de Milo and the arms which that delty has unfortunately mislaid, is dimpling and smiling into the face of an emafrom a ten-year-old silk tile set well on the back of his head. In vain his big masterful looking wife endeavors to hurry him along. Shehas had her own way in everything else ever since she promised to "love, honor, and obey" the agitated little man, who tries to swallow the spoon and upsets his second cup of chocolate in his nervous admiration, but this is her waterloo. The girl takes in the situation and holds this ill-fated Ulysses fast in her spell. "Just wait until I get him home." mutters the wife as she elhows her way along without him, while the girl tosses the gauze drapery off her bare arms and leans over the cups until the white throat is distractingly near him. He forgets all about the boys who call him father and the girls for whom he buys Bibles, the Sunday school where he is superintendent, and the church in which he is deacon, as he watches the pink roses she has tucked in against the white throat rise and fall with her irreath and the dimples come and go in her check.

"Fine looking girl, isn't she, mother?" he HE PODGETS PURDYING

"Fine looking girl, isn't she, mother?" he says as he joins his wife and meekly takes her paper bag of samples. "She's a bold, brazen huzzy, and you're an old fool," mother responds tenderly, with her nose in the air. "les" he answers nervously with a backward glance at the tempting vision.

As the crowd increases and surges round the booths and up and down the arcades you

Fealize that every one is out on a gastronomic ark, with a most daring disregard of the consequences. Here is a sailow, emaciated dysperic, who looks as if he hadn't eaten anything he liked since the war, devouring a slab of solid-looking nimes pie which a pretty girl is assuring him is quite equal to the homemade article. Eating it hot, too, when he hasn't eaten anything het in so long that it intoxicates him and makes him giddy and reckless. He harries from the mince meat to the fried cake counter, snatching a piece of fruit cake on the way, and washing dolly and reckless. He harries from the mince meat to the fried cake counter, snatching a piece of fruit cake on the way, and washing chorn a pickle with a griddlecake and a sample of toward cutsup. One girl, evidently before finishing with a griddlecake and a sample of toward cutsup. One girl, evidently before finishing with a griddlecake and a sample of toward cutsup. dresses smile and serve up savory viands: they adjure their favorite cakes and jellies to make life a dizzy razzle-dazzle for the man with the potato chips and the man with the dairy cream. He is a very susceptible young man, the cream man, with very pink hair and a tremendens corner on freekles. When they get him into a state of distraction, in which he pours milk on the bottom of the glass instead of in the top, and can't tell whether he's selling buttermilk or boiled oil, they flutter and drift away like a flight of swallows, laughing as they go, to surround the young man with the preserves. He has no booth to protect him, so they close in about him, puzzling him with learned nuestions as to the chemical principles upon which his fruit is prepared, begging for samples, and flashly turning and talking him over among themselves as if he were made of wax. like the old Quaker on the oatmeal booth, while he wonders why he was born and wishes to die. There is nothing so merciless as a girl of sixteen with a man that is afraid of her and lets her know it.

Types in the crowd and types at the booths arrest your attention as you allow your way about, driven by your ambition to secure samples and service. You may go into the show with a soul above carnal things, a lofty disdain for all save mental stimulus and scientific investigation. Before you've been there an hour the infection has seized your of suct, for a taste of beef extract, or a bang of salt, the Frian takes a sir.

THE FRANT TAKES A SIR.

Here is a friar in orders brown, gaunt, emaciated, atern, and silps over rose-colored jelly and feasting his eyes upon the prettiest girl in the show. You admire the old friar's taste and understand his appetite for jelly, for the girl is as dainty as a bit of painted china, with winsome, soft appealing eyes and a face as sweetly innocent as one of Fra Angelica's angels. There are peasant girls, too, French and Dutch, Spanish maidens, with bodices of black and gold over white muslin baby waists, and with veils of black lace entangling crimson posies and shrouding veils of black lace entangling crimson possies and shrouding bright faces. There is a creole beauty, with a dark, strong face, Iramed, oddly enough, in the demure gray of a Shaker bonnet; there is a Titlan Venus, with red gold hair, selling breakfast food, and a man not far away with the weird, dusky face of an Indian idol beneath a turban of white, imposing and lofty.

VERY NICE.

There is in the crowd the good-natured fat woman, who always goes to everything, and laughs when she gets in the way. She is devoted to pickles, and eats them from a modern toothpick with perhaps more energy than grace. There is the thin, anxious woman, who hurries up stairs to the cooking school and then hustles down again to gather up samples, fearful lest she doesn't get the worth of the season ticket some one has leaned her. She smiles patronizingly on the baking-nowder man, and assures him that she always uses his powder, but that she is just out now, and would he kindly give her a sample. Now, this man is a disgruntled, missunthronic kind of a chap. He is shut in a three-cornered little house all alone. He hasn't any pretty girls done up in picturesque frills to helb him, no dainty edibles to serve, no one to find fault with at all, and he stands an unhappy but indisputable proof that it is not good for man to be alone. He curtly refuses to give her samples, and she goes away saying that he is a mean old thing and that she didn't intend to buy any more of his powder any way. for it wasn't any good. Theu she goes over to the maited milk counter and drinks a whole glass of the sickening mixture, because the man there gives samples only to those who taste the food. VERY NICE.

There are any number of swains and swainesses on hand, for it isn't every night that a follow can take his best girl to a beid concert and a warm supper afterward for half a dollar.
Besides, there are covey retreats in the boxes, and behind the stalls, and at the back of the great sounding board, where the old, old story may be told again to whim gears, where every one is too much occupied to notice if there is holding of hands or any other foelighness.

Now, if the great thristopher could stop frying flappacks long enough to stroll round the show a little white he would observe that the most remarkable product in the world which he blandered into dispovering was the wonderful American baby whose headquarters are just now at the local show. It is a dimpled rosy, independent mite of humanity, gotten up on the same general plan, doubtless, as those in Columbia's time, but PICKLES.

ticket to the food show than a corner lot or a railroad bond. For not only can you get a good meal on the European plan in the building, but you may, if you are clever, carry away with you shough groceries to last the family a week, and have Miss Parloa tell you the best and sailest way to prove the sailest way to be sa with you shough groceries to last the family a week, and have Miss Parloa tell you the beat and sasiest way to prepare them for the table, all for the same price. Indeed, some of the country people in on the excursions have bought season tlekets, and lunch regularly at the booths before going down to watch the wonders of the electrical dairy, which never loves its attraction for them.

I tell you, mother, it beats all creation, doesn't it? said a sleek looking granger with capacious waistcoat and ruddy cheeks as he watched the process.

Yes." answered his starved, washed out, little, shrivelled wife, "but I'd rather skim milk till I dropped dead than have such an unghistian, dangerous thing in my buttery. I expect to dis when the time comes, but I don't want to be blowed into eternity 'causal'm too shiftless to skim my milk in the way I've done it for forty years. You can't git the coast clear for your second wife by tryin' that, for I won't give it house room."

Test $1.00 A WFEK. 'Tis sot $1.00 A WEEK. A fact; $1.00 A WEEK. Tell me how many men think of the value of $1.00 A WEEK and where the $1.00 A WEEK. Excess to. At the end of the year you are lost to know where the hard-carried dollar is or the 12 (6.2 weeks) has gone to.

We all can't be wealthy, but every many an own a home, if he is not a drone. Now, wives your happiness is centred in the few words which I offer. I am not offering any farm land cut up in town lots, or organizing any boom town, where everything is going TO as k but there for the purchasers, or ask you to go up in the country for miles to get a bone; or in the out-of-way places on Long Island, with a dozen changes on railroad and a day's salary for car fare, but I will sell you, right in the city or

An Immigrant Girl Abandoned.

Ellis Island, as she has been abandoned by her relatives. She arrived here on the Normannia with her mother, and went to Hoffman Island with the rest of the steerage passengers. On the trip to Ellis Island it is said that the girl's mother abandoned her, registered at Ellis Island, and disappeared. The girl's father is said to be living somewhere in Jersey City. Col. Weber will hold the girl until an effort is made to find her father.
